Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

Weather

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Medford Weather:

A strong ridge aloft will build over the area this weekend into early next week resulting in warm, dry weather. Areas inland from the coast will have about 10-15 degrees of warming today over yesterday, which will put west side valleys into the mid to upper 70s for highs with mid to upper 60s east of the cascades in Oregon and over Northeast California. Another 10 degrees or so of warming can be expected Sunday. With sunshine, and a mid-April sun angle, this supports highs at least in the upper 80s, if not 90 degrees here at the airport. We do expect varying amounts of high thin clouds though as a trough offshore edges eastward.

Eureka Weather:

High pressure will bring dry and warmer weather conditions today through Sunday.

Reno Weather:

High pressure builds over the region with winds remaining light. Temperatures warm above seasonal averages for the weekend into early next week. Low chances of precipitation return to the Sierra mid to late week.

San Francisco Weather:

Building high pressure over the region and developing offshore flow will result in a robust warming trend through Sunday. A gradual cooling trend will commence on Monday and likely persist through the middle of next week with increased chances of rain showers late next week.

Sacramento Weather:

High pressure will remain in control through early next week with dry weather and warm temperatures. Chances of widespread precipitation late in the week.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Hanford Weather:

High pressure will continue to build over the area and persist for the next several days creating a warming trend. Possible change in the pattern late next week.

Weather

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Well above normal temperatures are expected this weekend as high pressure builds into the Great Basin and gusty north winds shift to the Northeast. A gradual cooling trend is expected next week as high pressure weakens and a trough of low pressure develops, but temperatures will remain above normal through mid-week.

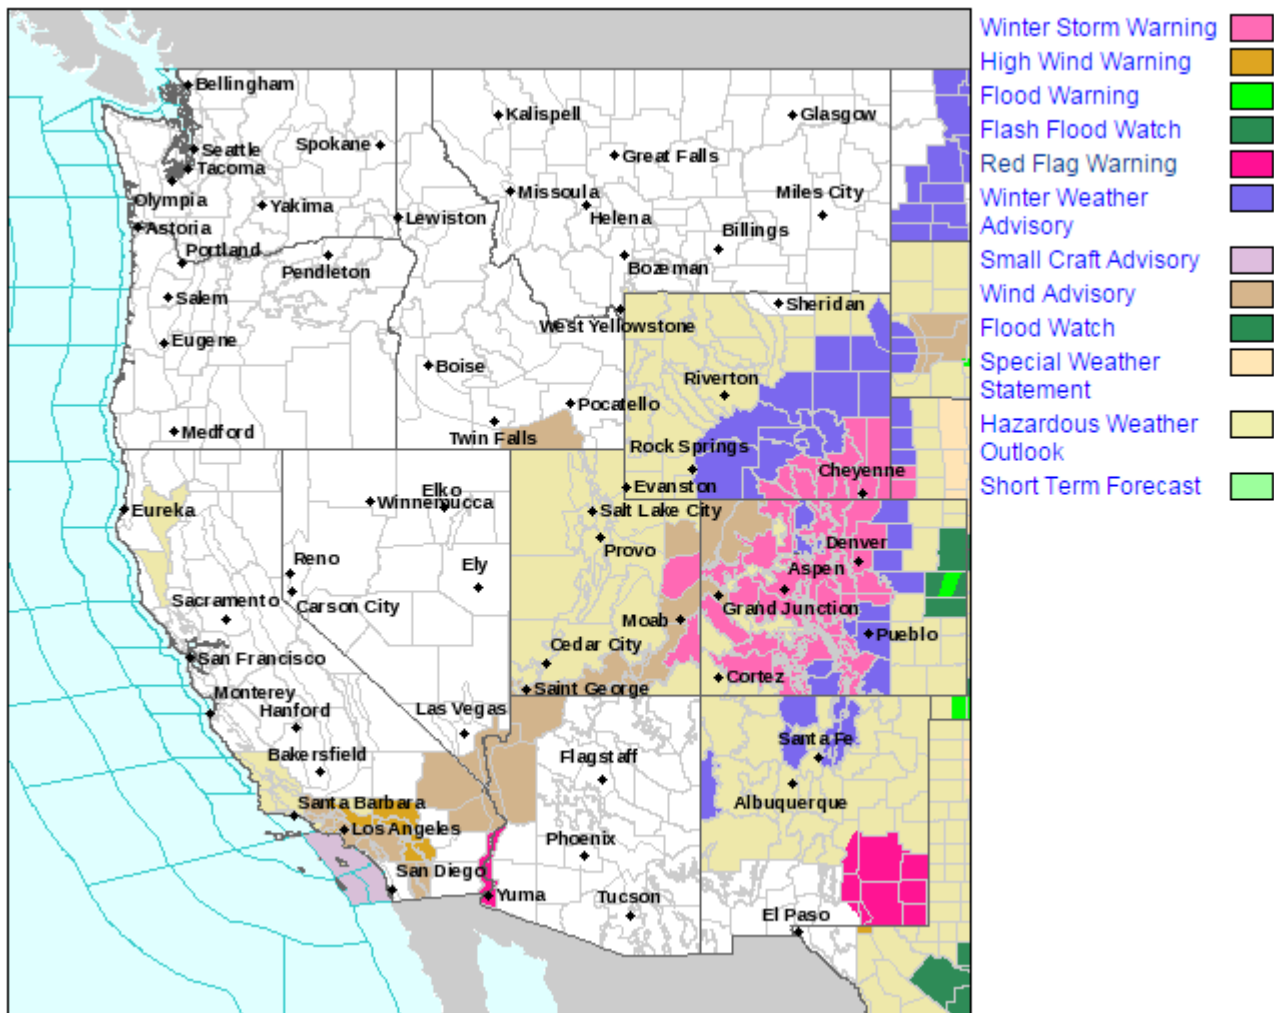

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Gusty north to northeast winds will continue into this morning then decrease during the afternoon. Another round of gusty Northeast winds is expected late tonight through Sunday morning near the coastal foothills and in the inland valleys. Strengthening high pressure aloft near the west coast will continue warming for far inland areas through mid-week with slow cooling spreading inland from the coast beginning Monday or Tuesday. Coastal low clouds and fog may return as early as late Tuesday night and early Wednesday increasing each night into next weekend. A trough of low pressure moving inland along the west coast towards the end of next week or next weekend is expected to bring cooling and gusty west winds to the mountains and deserts. Chances for precipitation are less certain but possible.

Southeast California Weather:

An unseasonably strong pacific weather system will move across the Western United States today bringing breezy to windy conditions and cooler temperatures. Warmer and drier weather will return next week with much above normal afternoon temperatures Wednesday through Friday.
